💡 Workshop Promise: "In 90 minutes, you'll have a re-architected offer that clients choose NOT because AI can't do it — but because your taste and judgment are irreplaceable."

Pre-Workshop Preparation

Get maximum value from this workshop by completing these questions before we start:

1. What's one deliverable you currently provide that a client could theoretically get from AI?

2 What's the specific outcome you help clients achieve? (Not what you DO—the RESULT they get)

3 Who is your current target audience? Be as specific as possible.

What to Bring

This workbook (printed or digital)
Your current offer/positioning document
A willingness to get uncomfortable
Your willingness to challenge assumptions about how you deliver value

Exercise 1: Map Your Value Chain

1 Value Chain Map

Every service or product has multiple layers. Some are vulnerable to AI commoditization, others aren't. Your job is to see exactly where your value sits.

The Three Layers of Value

🔴 Execution
Writing, designing, coding, producing. AI can do this.

🟡 Strategy
Suggesting, planning, outlining. AI can help, but needs direction.

🟢 Judgment
Choosing, committing, owning the decision. Only you can do this.

⚠️ The AI-Proof Question: "Where does my value sit?"
If it's in Execution → You're vulnerable. If it's in Strategy → You're getting there. If it's in Judgment → You're AI-proof.

Instructions

1. List every deliverable you provide to clients
2. Mark each one: Execution / Strategy / Judgment
3. Color-code using the legend above

Your Value Chain Map

Client Deliverable	Layer	AI Can Do This?

EXAMPLE

Value Chain Map for a Content Writer

Write blog post	Execution	YES — High vulnerability
Research topic angles	Strategy	PARTIALLY — Needs direction
Decide which stories only YOU can tell	Judgment	NO — This is the AI-proof layer

Your Key Insight

After mapping your value chain, what's one shift you could make to move more of your value into the Judgment layer?

Exercise 2: Find Your Uncomfortable Niche

2 The Uncomfortable Niche

The "uncomfortable niche" is a specific audience + specific outcome that makes you slightly uncomfortable. That's how you know it's right. Generic positioning gets lost. Specific, slightly scary positioning attracts.

"I help [SPECIFIC PERSON] achieve [SPECIFIC OUTCOME] — even though [THEIR DEEP FEAR] "

Why This Works

- Specific → Clients self-select (no chasing)
- Outcome-based → It's about their result, not your process
- Fear-based → Taps into emotional motivation
- Uncomfortable → If it doesn't scare you a little, it's not specific enough

EXAMPLES: GENERIC VS. UNCOMFORTABLE

GENERIC	UNCOMFORTABLE NICHE
"Help freelancers with marketing"	"I help freelance designers who hate selling get 3 clients/month — without sending a single cold DM"
"Consulting for startups"	"I help solo founders who've raised <$100k stop copying big-company strategies that don't work at their stage"

Your Uncomfortable Niche

Write 3 versions. Pick the one that makes you slightly uncomfortable. That's probably the right one.

Version 1:

Version 2:

Version 3:

Your Selected Uncomfortable Niche

Fill in: "I help [SPECIFIC PERSON] achieve [SPECIFIC OUTCOME] — even though [THEIR DEEP FEAR]"

✅ Why this works: The right niche isn't for everyone. It's for someone specific who needs exactly what you offer. By getting uncomfortable, you're actually getting more selective—which attracts better clients.

Exercise 3: Redesign Your Offer Stack

3 Offer Stack Redesign

Now it's time to transform your offer from execution-focused to judgment-focused. The key: shift from what you DO to what the client GETS.

Current Offer Analysis

What:	Describe your current offer
Who:	Who is it for?
Price:	Current price
Format:	Service / Product / Hybrid
Vulnerability:	What's the execution piece AI could replace?

The Transformation

TRANSFORMATION EXAMPLE

BEFORE (EXECUTION-FOCUSED)

"I'll write 5 blog posts for you"

❌ Client can get this from AI. You're competing on price.

AFTER (JUDGMENT-FOCUSED)

"I'll help you decide which 5 stories only YOU can tell — and build a content engine that reflects your taste, not templates"

✅ Requires your taste + judgment. Can't be replicated by AI.

AI-Proof Offer

What:	Rewrite using Judgment focus — what's the outcome, not the process?
Who:	Use your uncomfortable niche
Price:	Justify via outcome, not time
Format:	Upgrade to outcome-based

UNIQUE MECHANISM: What can ONLY you provide? What's your proprietary framework, perspective, or process?

Before / After Comparison

BEFORE	AFTER

💡 Pro Tip: Your unique mechanism is what makes you irreplaceable. It could be a proprietary framework, a specific perspective, a process you've developed, or your > specific taste. The key is: it can't be replicated by AI because it's yours.

The AI-Proof Framework

These three questions are your filter for any offer, service, or product. Run everything through this lens.

QUESTION 1

Where does my value sit — Execution, Strategy, or Judgment?

If Execution → Shift to Judgment. The higher up the stack, the more AI-proof you are.

QUESTION 2

Is my niche specific and slightly uncomfortable?

If it doesn't make you slightly uncomfortable, it's not specific enough. Generic = invisible.

QUESTION 3

What's my unique mechanism that AI can't replicate?

This is your unfair advantage. It could be taste, perspective, experience, or a proprietary framework.

✅ The AI-Proof Test: If you can answer all three questions with specificity and conviction, your offer is built to last. If any question makes you squirm, that's where the work is.
